David Levine's Choice

THE ARTIST'S FAVORITE DRAWINGS FROM THE NEW YORK REVIEW OF BOOKS

A Delightful Present for You DAVID LEVINE'S CHOICE

The Artist's Favorite Drawings
From The New York Review of Books

Among the pleasures of The New York Review — and the most appreciated, judging by subscribers' comments — have been the witty caricatures drawn by David Levine.

At his recent one-man show, The New York Times said, "...Mr. Levine has revived the art of caricature almost single handedly. He has endowed it with a vitality and a relevance which it lacked for decades..."

Now, from more than a thousand drawings that have appeared in The New York Review, the artist has himself selected 16 of his favorites for reproduction in this richly-printed Portfolio. This new collection includes drawings not only from the worlds of literature and art, including Ernest Hemingway, Oscar Wilde, Montaigne, Picasso, but also many of Levine's famed political caricatures.

Each drawing is faithfully reproduced on a separate sheet of heavy stock, 8 inches wide by 11 inches deep. The individual sheets may be framed—or kept within the Portfolio.

The Editors of The New York Review take pleasure in being able to offer David Levine's Choice with their compliments in appreciation of your support in entering your trial subscription at this time.

*A special present

most important magazine

Dear Reader:

Why is The New York Review so different? Why has it been called "the best general review in at least a generation"? The New York Review stands out because it is. A good cultural review should divide opinions they will accept tomorrow.

Since it began publishing seven years ago, it has reshaped the standards and thinking. It has, for one thing, redefined what a good cultural review should be. The New York Times praised it "brilliantly . . ." because of its "sharpness" or the theatre and movies, for that matter, to be indulged in when the

DOM05

Moreover, The New York Review has published major studies which have re-oriented discussion of the great issues of our time - for example, Hannah Arendt's "Reflections on Violence", Noam Chomsky's devastating essay "After Pinkville", I. F. Stone's brilliant, five-part series on the modus operandi of the American military establishment, and John McDermott on "Technology and the Intellectuals".

In the pages of The New York Review you will often find the unexpected - distinguished writers reporting and commenting on contemporary events: Francine Gray on the Catholic Ultra-Resistance, Elinor Langer's exposé of the working conditions of the women in the New York Telephone Company, Jason Epstein on the Chicago Conspiracy Trial, Murray Kempton's regular coverage of the American scene from Spiro Agnew to John Lindsay, and Igor Stravinsky's observations on the current musical situation.

These writers - and those on the opposite page - know they are writing for a group who represent something new and important in America: more than 100,000 readers who feel that the serious discussion of important books and ideas is itself an exciting and indispensable part of life. These readers know that, in The New York Review, the widest possible range of subjects - literature, art, politics, science, history, music, theatre, education, etc. - will be discussed on the highest critical level.

AN INTRODUCTORY OFFER - AND A SPECIAL PRESENT FOR YOU

For your convenience, we have set up a very simple way for you to find out - without risking a cent - whether you will enjoy The New York Review. Under this plan, you would receive The Review for an introductory 9-month period (18 issues) for only $7.50 with this unique guarantee: that you can at any time receive full refund of the entire cost with no charge for the copies you have received.

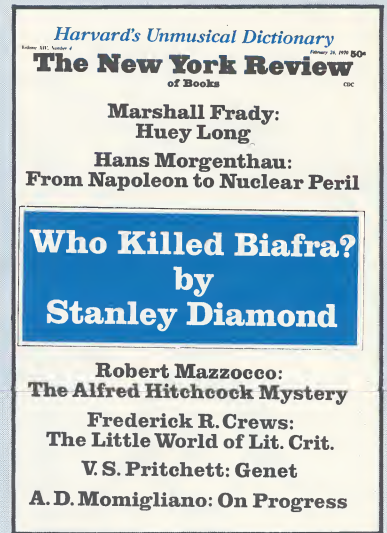

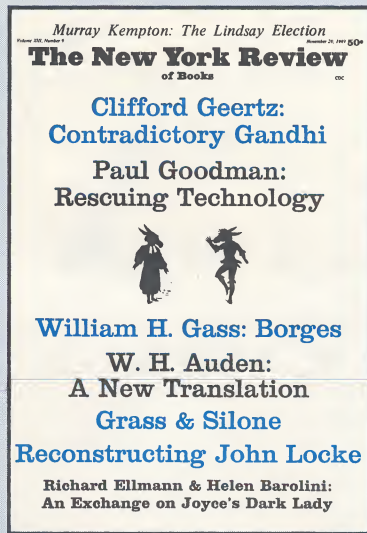

In addition, you will receive the Portfolio of DAVID LEVINE'S CHOICE - with 16 brilliant caricatures on heavy stock suitable for framing. It is yours with our compliments regardless of whether or not you take advantage of your refund guarantee.

The New York Times' reviewer, Christopher Lehmann-Haupt, wrote that "The New York Review of Books provides as good an intellectual history of the sixties as I can imagine . . . " Now, as we enter the Seventies, why not join us in this exciting intellectual adventure?

Sincerely yours,

A. Whitney Ellsworth

The New York Review of Books

Dear Reader:

Why is The New York Review so different from any other magazine? Why has it been called "the best general review to appear in this country in at least a generation"? As Alfred Kazin explained, "The New York Review stands out because it can still make people mad . . . . A good cultural review should divide people, outrage them today with opinions they will accept tomorrow . . . ."

Since it began publishing seven years ago, The New York Review has reshaped the standards and thinking of American intellectual life. It has, for one thing, redefined what good book reviews should be — probing essays on the real issues raised by the most important books being published. The New York Times has said, "(It) has succeeded brilliantly . . ." because of its "stubborn refusal to treat books, or the theatre and movies, for that matter, as categories of entertainment to be indulged in when the working day is done."

We think you will enjoy this kind of free-wheeling, serious — but never dull — writing that gives books and ideas the importance and excitement they deserve.

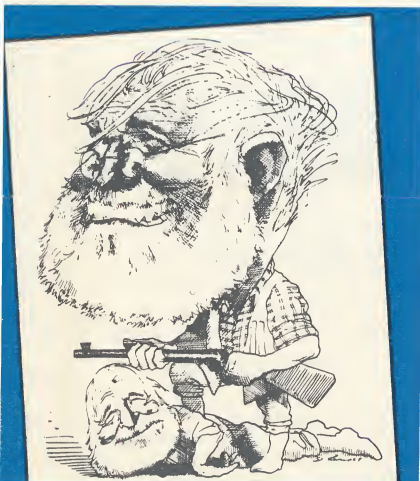

For this reason, we have set up for you an introductory trial without any risk on your part so that you can see for yourself what a great paper The New York Review is . . . .

What's more, we will send you free DAVID LEVINE'S CHOICE — a brilliant new portfolio of 16 drawings by the famous caricaturist. These are his own favorites among more than a thousand he has done for The New York Review.

Never before have so many of the world's best writers and scholars — themselves a major force in literature and ideas — been so willing to contribute to a single magazine as they have for The New York Review. Subscribers have enjoyed in recent issues:

V. S. PRITCHETT's review of Jean Genet's Funeral Rites;
VIRGIL THOMSON on Berlioz, Boulez, and Edith Piaf;
MARSHALL FRADY on T. Harry William's Huey Long;
GORE VIDAL's review of Gaeton Fonzi's Annenberg:
A Biography of Power;
MARY MCCARTHY on Nathalie Sarraute's Between Life and Death.
